

SELFguarding Newsletter No: 4

Monday 15th of May 2023

Happy new month from SELFguarding

Yes, I know it's been two whole months without any updates, and for that I do apologize.

SELFguarding was very busy in March with our pilot happening at Redden Court School, which is why you all never got a March Newsletter. But with loads of positive feedback directly from the Dept of Education, SELFguarding is now ready to take off.

I'm happy to bring the news of SELFguarding being featured in Education today, which is a magazine circulated to over 45,000 Head Teachers and education professionals.

Other than the pilot going really well with the Dept of Education and being featured in a well-known Magazine, there's not much more to report!!!!

What's next for SELFguarding, you may ask? Well, our next step is to continue to build a stronger relationship with the Dept Of Education, in the hope to make a more positive contribution to cutting child abuse than is currently being managed. Part of this journey is the wish to get our children fit and strong, not just physically but mentally, and to continue to spread the word of SELFguarding's unique approach.

To wrap up this Newsletter I would like to say a massive thank you to Kane Ward who is the Deputy Head at Redden Court School, and to my newly found SELFguarding team teacher, Nicole Charles, who did an amazing job delivering our Teacher Resources during the Pilot. Once again thank you all for your support.

Look forward to updating you all again soon.

Take care from
